From my prospective, CSA 69 is solvent and functioning well. I do not see the need to "fix" what is not broken. From what I can tell, this is just swapping one type of entity for another since the same parties are in each one. Is this being done because some think the 40 year old CSA isn't fancy enough? In my opinion, JPAs create more bureaucracy and overhead than the current system has. What is the benefit to the taxpayers? Right off the bat, if the JPA is created, almost $400,000 is expended. It is unnecessarily wasted money. Again, how does this benefit the taxpayer? If CSA 69 is dissolved, how will the successor agencies fund this service? I presume the tax line on my property tax bill will disappear since this is not what the voters approved in 1980. What type of taxing authority will be granted to this new JPA?

I strongly oppose this dissolution, as the entities pushing this have not demonstrated why is should move forward. I feel the taxpayers who created and fund CSA 69 have not been informed of this potentially major change.

Thank you,
Richard Hensle

Follow Up Flag: Follow up

The notation has shown that fees may be charged, we do not currently pay fees for transport. This is not what CSA 69 voters signed up for.
